How2Learn
The good news is that learning itself is very ‘learnable.’

Learning dispositions are inherent in all of us and in fact, children come to school as exceptional learners. They have grasped amazingly complex skills such as learning to speak and walk. They are curious, fearless explorers of their world. Learning habits can be encouraged, exercised and honed. There is no limit to how well we can develop our capacity to learn.

We can help students become better learners by modeling the language of good learners. Guy Claxton in his book The Learning Powered School suggests that we teach teachers, students and families how to speak ‘Learnish.’

Do you speak ‘Learnish?’

Have a great week!
